

INVITATION TO WEBINAR

New Pact on Migration and Asylum: The Future of Dublin Regulation

Thursday, 3 December 2020, 15:30-17:00

REGISTRATION

In the frame of the project Thesis, Antithesis, Synthesis Migration Labs funded by which is funded by the Europe for Citizens Programme of the EU, the partnership pleased to invite you to our second webinar. In this webinar, we will address the new changes to the EU migration policy presented by the European Commission last September. With the new Pact on Migration and Asylum, the Commission proposes common European solutions to what is an European challenge. But what are the implications of the new reform of the Dublin system? How does the Dublin Regulation work, and what are the concrete implications for migrants and their decision to travel within Europe?

The "Dublin system", which today is based on the Dublin III Regulation (EU Regulation n. 604/2013), although characterized by a limited numerical impact, has been having a strong impact on people's lives: when relocation and resettlements from one country to another are carried out, secondary movements back to the departure country are still frequent. The system is frail; it has not created a real climate of cooperation between EU member States, but, instead, it created heavy repercussions on the communities, and it has badly influenced the objective of inclusion at local level. As part of an integral reform of migration policy, the European Commission is proposing a revision of the Dublin Regulation, which, however, risks not changing the basic political choices but rather strengthening them. Starting from a political-normative overview, the webinar aims to highlight some relevant steps of the impact of the Dublin III Regulation on the rights guaranteed to people.

SPEAKERS

Professor Florian Trauner

Florian Trauner holds the Jean Monnet Chair EXACT (Explaining EU Action in Counter-Terrorism) and is the director of the VUB's Master Programme on European and International Governance. He is also a Visiting Professor at the College of Europe, where he teaches a course on EU migration policies (with Sandra Lavenex). His research interests concern EU justice and home affairs (in particular migration, asylum, return and counter-terrorism policies), linkages between European home affairs policies and foreign affairs/external relations, and dynamics of EU decision-making.

Giuseppe Platania

Giuseppe Platania is a current PhD candidate in political science and sociology at the Scuola Normale Superiore and he is carrying out a research on the exploitation of asylum seekers in the EU. He has worked as a social operator and researcher for borderline Sicilia and borderline Europe, monitoring EU border practices.
